Getting American Education America's great interest in Greece is evidenced in educational and other ways. Among the educational institutions which bear an American tutions which bear an American stamp and are directed by American NAVY ESTIMATES initiative and leadership, is the Athens College, started in 1925. The undertaking has been in great part financed by the well-known Greek benefactor, Mr. Benakis, who has subscribed more than 15,000,000 drachmas for this purpose. This sum has been used to erect the main bullding of the sellegy which bears building of the college, which bears the name of the donor. The building, started two years ago, is almost com-pleted. COPENHAGEN - The beautiful tower in Copenhagen, known as Rundetaarn, is to revert to its former use for which it was built, i. e., a public observatory. This tower is 112 feet in height, and was constructed in 1642, from plans drawn by Longo-montanus, favorite pupil of Tycho Brahe the Danish astronomer and was used at that time as an observa-tory, therefore it seems fitting that it should be used again for that purpose, Henning Hansen, architect, has charge of this work, which will be completed shortly.

The Round Tower has many pleasant associations for the Dane, for there is a wonderful spiral way, five meters in width, by which the platform of the tower is reached. From an architectural point of view, the tower is considered to be one of the most unique in Europe. Of the New School of Statesmen

The salient point in the Mexican civil war is the arms embargo placed munitions for the rebels and the willingness to permit exports of guns and ammunition to the federal troops. This policy, it is considered in circles close to the Administration and Mexican Embassy, gives an immeasurable advantage, both in mo-rale and in physical equipment, to the Government of Portes Gil.

Whatever temporary fluctuations occur in the tide of fighting, this factor of military supplies may in the end be decisive.

Meanwhile there is a disposition here to believe that the revolution begins to show signs of having spent its force. Unless something unex-pected occurs, the divided operations of various rebel commanders who have been operating in widely separated districts, will not be coa esced and consolidated into a unified campaign, it is anticipated.

The capture of Juarez gives no physical benefit to the rebels, since the town is of minor importance, but it intensifies the difficulty of upholding the arms embargo.

AIR ESTIMATES INTRODUCED IN BRITISH HOUSE

Sir Samuel Hoare Tells of Great Advance Made in Aviation

By Wingless

LONDON-Introducing the air estimates amounting to £16,000,000 in the House of Commons on Friday, Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary for the Air said that while expenditure upon air armaments had been increasing in other parts of the world, the British net expenditure for the fourth year in succession showed a decrease. Four prominent features in the estimates were, firstly, that at the end of the year the strength of the air

India would begin in a few weeks time, while he hoped during the next few months to be able to make the necessary arrangements for starting the other great trunk line of the Empire from London to Cape Town. Thirdly, definite provision had been made for the further advance in technical and scientific development The further advance would be made in the field of metal construction.

Stimulating Air Service Fourthly, a new proposal had been made in the civil aviation vote for stimulating the air sense of the Nation and making it easier for young men and women to learn to fly.

Dealing with the question of the air defense of British shores, Sir few weeks service to India should be flying weekly and doing the journey in from six to seven days. In reference to the London to Cape Service, Sir Samuel said he had included a sum in the present estimates for starting the project. It would take at least 12 months to get the service regularly operating. The British Government was prepared to take its share in the cost of the service and he thought everyone would agree that with routes passing through so many different territories, all the governments concerned should take their share.

British Bear Cost

The British Government was already bearing the whole burden of the subsidy for the section from England to Egypt, but was prepared to go further and give substantial support also to the African sections, provided other governments concerned played their part. Dealing with the machines, the Minister stated that "among the first items in our program are a boat of a new type with twin floats, a larger flying boat than to test the rival claims of mono-planes and biplanes for civil pur-poses. Meanwhile further advance will be made in the field in which we already have a leading place in the world in the field of metal con-struction. Four years ago the Air Ministry was ordering only one metal machine to every 19 of wooden con-struction. Today the orders are seven metal machines for one

Checker TaxI

Announces Arrival of New Cars

Following our policy of offering patrons only the very best that can be procured, we have spent some little time in investigating fully the merits of the different cabs at present on the market.

As a result, orders have been placed for a large fleet of most luxurious and wonderfully appointed cars, to replace the cabs at present in commission. A considerable number of these cars are now on the streets and others will follow just as fast as the factory can supply.

Inspect these cars. Convince yourself of their extreme comfort and riding qualities. You could not imagine anything more beautiful or luxurious even in a high priced private car.

To a greater degree than ever we can now claim that preference which the Boston public have so generously accorded at all times to Checker Taxi.

Checker drivers are fully uniformed, of known and proved character and ability. They are an active part of a dependable organization, working with earnest endeavor under the protection of the best possible system of Financial and Moral Responsibility.

The railroads which bring the people to Boston are eager, and anxious, to safeguard their patrons, and for that reason all of them have chosen Checker Taxi to meet all incoming trains at all depots. What better guarantee can be had of Checker service-faithful, safe and wholly reliable.

For the same reason, Checker Taxi has the endorsement of a great majority of the high class hotels, which feel that they are responsible for the kind of taxicab service they give to their guests. and so choose the one best qualified to give them the required exceptional results.

This is a stamp of approval of extraordinary distinction. It is only natural and logical that Checker Taxi should do everything possible to deserve such signal recognition. FRANK SAWYER, President.

PEACE COUNCIL OF CHURCHMEN LAUDS HOOVER

in Kellogg Pact

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR COLUMBUS, O .- Definition of war as criminal, not only in terms of international statute but of moral law as well, is embraced in a resolution under discussion during the plenary sessions of the second national study conference on the churches and world peace. The resolution was introduced by Dr. A. C. Goddard, secretary of the world peace commisof the Methodist Episcopa

Considerable debate was precipitated when this proposition was put forth. Numerous delegates, headed by the Rev. Dr. E. F. Dempsey of Macon, Ga., a representative of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, argued that the church should not place its ban upon a war of selfdefense nor upon an internal revolt within a given state where the end sought was freedom from alien domination. The final wording of this particular resolution will be considmember of the League. It was also recommended that the United States join the World Court without reservations and that the optional clause also be signed which provides for compulsory arbitration.

Greater Efforts Needed During progress of the debate on the relation of the Paris peace pact to future good will efforts of the churches Judge Florence E. Allen of the Ohio Supreme Court cautioned the delegates not to be deceived into believing that the coming into effect of the pact had made resort to war an international crime.

"By claiming too much for the pact," said Judge Allen, "we will be postponing rather than hastening establishment of world peace. In a few localities where large cities lie not too far apart there has been a modernization of the inter-urban electric cars with beneficial results on the company income from fares. One such instance under Stone & Webster management is the line between Dallas and Fort Worth, Tex. There, Mr. Nash related, a "crimson limited" is run every hour in addition to the "local" cars, and cars used are "parlor cars," built for quietness, with upholstered seats and improved lighting. Get Surplus Immigration The reason of such rapid growth, he said, is due largely to immigration that has been diverted from the United States since the adoption of a restrictive policy. South American untries encourage immigration by granting aid in securing land. Their big problem, he continued, is in breaking up the large landed estates so that land may be given to new settlers. Dr. Inman stressed the difference in business methods between North and South America and noted that our large exports of manufactures to South America were consumed by the cultured class, which is the business class.

coach no more for the Indians from New Hampshire's hills.

Announcement that his Chicago radio business had at last claimed his undivided attention, a situation anticipated by Partmouth men for the past several seasons, came yesterday from Harry R. Heneage, athletic supervisor, at the same time he announced that Jackson L. Cannell, backfield coach and predecessor of Hawley as gridiron mentor, would again take over the iron mentor, would again take over the iron mentor, would again take over the managerial reins.

In a statement which echoed the sentiments of a legion of Dartmouth followers, Heneage said, "the unavailability of Hawley is recognized as a great loss to those of us who appreciate the services which he has rendered during the last six years and the success that has attended his efforts."

Hawley's teams, with the exception of last year's eleven, have been the most successful in Dartmouth's football history. The undefeated team of 1925 was his greatest triumph. It easily defeated Harvard, Cornell, Chicago, and Brown, and forced a tie with Yale. His elevens were especially noted for their elaborately planned forward passing game.

England is not quite at full strength in the game, owing to the enforced pathles.

Australia, taking a long view about this match now that the "ashes" have been retained by England, has introduced a leavening of fresh talent in bowlers, H. Hornibrook, T. Wall and A. Fairfax, all of whom, if they justify the selection, will be seen in England in 1930.

In Chapman's absence the duties of captain fell upon J. C. White. The veteran bowling hero of previous games performed the first of them games performed the first of the first faultlessly by winning the toss. The correct forecast of the spin of the coin may have a big bearing on the result. For the first time in many such games Hobbs when he opened England's innings was not accompanied by his renowned first wicket partner, Sut-cliffe. Instead he was accompanied by D. R. Jardine, Surrey amateur. Wall and Hornibrook started their

Wall and Hornibrook started their experience in test match play by bowling against these master batsmen who, with no need of hurrying, set themselves to the task of digging in with great deliberation. England after 25 minutes of play had 16 runs on the board and Hobbs had reached double figures. Changes in the Australian bowling kept the rate of scoring down so low that at one time eight overs were sent down for four runs, seven of the overs being maidens.

Cricket fans are noted for statistics and when Hobbs reached 31, which meant he had completed 1000 runs on Melbourne grounds in test matches a burst of cheering greeted the achievement.

Jardine continued passively and even tempered the "barrackers" geniality with certain asperity, but the amateur seemed quite content to be purely a defense machine and when lunch time came along 51 runs were added to England's credit as the result of 85 minutes of cricket. The partner ship was not continued long after the resumption, however, as Jardine, trying to get a bail from Wall away to the leg side mistimed it and saw the wicket keeper, W. A. Oldfield, rush to one side and effect a brilliant catch.

Interest Reawakened Interest was reawakened with the arrival of W. R. Hammond in Jardine's place as the great Gloucesterdine's place as the great Gloucestershire batsman required only 49 to complete 1000 runs in one test series—a feat entirely without precedent. Hobbs and Hammond soon settled down to a good understanding and began to steal short runs and generally infuse liveliness into the proceedings. A hundred runs went up after 125 minutes and Hobbs, getting into his stride, began to delight the watchers with every stroke in the game's repertoire. When he had made 77 he gave an easy chance of a catch that was not accepted.

Atonement was made for Australia shortly afterward, however, Fairfax CHMOOKLER SPRINGS

Hobbs is greatly popular wherever cricket is played and cheers greeted every run that took him nearer a century. When he did get there, there was a remarkable display of enthusiasm which prevented play for several min-utes. Hobbs' magnificent innings term-inated for 142 when he stepped in front of a straight ball from Ryder. He had been batting for 4h, 35m. in fluent tyle, and in one of his greatest of days. A home where Gas is the Magic Queen of service

OW would you like to live in a home like this where labor is light, and where cozy comfort is ever present?

Gas is the reason. From cellar to attic, gas is the cheerful, silent, ever-willing servant. Come with us to the basement. Did vou ever see a cleaner one? Here a dirty coal bin is a total stranger. Here barrels are never juggled to stir up clouds of sifting, settling, contaminating dust.

Now let's see what is in this new-day cellar. At the left, you will note the unit which operates the gas refrigerator in the alcove above. And by the way, you surely should investigate gas refrigeration. It's the last word in a noiseless, troublefree way to keep food fresh, pure and wholesome.

To the right are the tubs, and then that amazing invention - the gas laundry dryer. With one of these you can laugh at stormy washdays. No more delays. No more clothing ruined by wind and storm. In a few minutes the laundry is dried ready for ironing — white, speckless, clean-smelling and sterilized.

Next you'll see the gas water heater, ever ready to supply, instantly, the abundance of hot water that is required throughout the house for cleanliness and comfort.

Together, in the foreground, are the gas house heater and the incinerator. This heater needs no attention all winter long. Light it in the fall. Turn it off in the spring. The heat is regulated by an "indicator" upstairs—just the warmth you want, any time, even with zero weather outside.

The incinerator banishes two of the household's greatest menaces, filth-breeding garbage and fireinviting trash - burns them daily before they have an opportunity to accumulate.

And last, but not least, in our model basement, at the extreme right, is the garage with its gas heater to keep your car warm and ready to start when-

Upstairs, the fascinating story of gas continues. A range in the kitchen, with its heat control feature-cooks with almost no attention. In the living and dining rooms, the gas Radiantfire provides the warm, cheery glow of an open fire. In bathroom, kitchen and laundry, an abundance of hot water, instantly available, for every household need. And in the attic, comfortable heat from a gas radiator to make another livable room.

You, too, may enjoy any or all of these aids to better living. See your own gas company for demonstrations and for facts about the easy payment plan by which gas appliances of every kind may be purchased.

Ask your gas company for a free copy of this booklet, "Gas-the Servant of Mankind." It tells the romantic story of gas -how to select and care for gas appliances—and contains new ideas for housekeeping. Write, phone, or call for your copy.

GOOD RALLY AFTER EARLY WEAK PERIOD

Radio Again Becomes Big Performer, Making New High Record

NEW YORK (P)—Speculation for the advance was resumed on a broad scale in today's stock market after an early period of weakness.

Early losses of 1 to 8½ points were quickly wiped out, and the general market turned upward under the leadership of Radio (old stock), which railied from a low of 398½, off 8½ points, to a new high record at 435. Radio (new) also changed hands in enormous volume at rising prices.

The initial outbreak of selling undoubtedly was inspired by the unexpectedly large increase of $140,000,000 in brokers' loans and the statement of Paul Warburg, international banker, that control of the money market had passed from the Federal Reserve Board to Stock Exchange operators. Strong buying support was provided on the break, and a general recovery was in full swing before mid-day.

Call money renewed at 10 per cent with the supply so plentiful that the rate was expected to work lower. Time money, commercial paper and bankers' acceptance rates held firm around the year's high levels.

Concurrent strength of Radio and Western Union, which also advanced 6 points to a new high, revived rumors of a merger of these two companies, but President Harbord of the Radio Corporation, stated that the merger was definitely off.

Except for the publication of a series of favorable earnings statements, the easier undertone for call money and reports that good progress was being made on the crude oil curtailment program, there was little in the day's business news to influence the price movements.

Most of the Conservative commis-

he day's business news to influence

Most of the conservative commission houses continued to urge extreme caution in the making of new commitments, but this failed to deter pool mitments, but this failed to deter pool activity. The rapid advance in some of the high priced specialties indicated the running in of an over-crowded short interest.

Rossia Insurance soared 96 points, Victor Talking Machine 6 to a new high at 167, and Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Miami Copper, Advance Rumely common and preferred, Stromberg Carburetor, Peoples Gas and Mexican Seaboard Oil sold 3 to nearly 5 points higher.

As in most recent sessions, activity in today's market showed a tendency to increase on the rallies and decrease on the declines. Pool operators construed this as an indication that speculative accounts were well construed this as an indication that speculative accounts were well margined and that there was still a large backlog of buying power just below current levels.

Wide price swings continued in the Radio group in the final hour. Radio (old) reaching 440 while the new stock crossed 88. Western Union lost nearly all of its 6-point advance. Jeduction crossed 88. Western Union lost nearly all of its 6-point advance. Ieduction in the call money rate to 9 per cent influenced more general buying, with food issues, particularly Postum and National Biscuit, moving up fast. The closing was strong. Sales approximated 3,900,000 shares.

Foreign exchanges opened steady, with sterling cables quoted around $4.85\[6]4.

The continued decline in the bond market under the pressure of high money rates today was accelerated by the selling of stocks and uneasiness over Paul Warburg's statement that the Federal Reserve System had lost control of the money market. A number of issues established new lows for the year. Activity continued to center in the convertibles the year. Activity continued to center in the convertibles.

The success of Newark, N. J., in marketing its bonds encouraged other municipalities to re-offer rejected issues, some at concessions of slightly higher interest rates. Bloomfield, N. J., advanced the rate on its $1,500,000 school and municipal building bonds from 4½ to 4% per cent. Another New Jersey community—Nutley—is placing a $1,325,000 issue, carrying rates from 4% to 6 per cent.

Anaconda Copper 7s slipped back 2½ points in sympathy with the stocks. International Telephone 4½s and Atchison 4½s also were under pressure. International Cement 5s lost a point.

The decline in the industrials was led by International Match 5s, which withded.

The decline in the industrials was led by International Match 5s, which yielded a point on some selling believed due to a switch of bondholders in this company to securities of its parent, Krueger & Toll. The latter company marketed $50,000,000 in bonds yesterday. U. S. Rubber 7½s were strong.

Rails again were under pressure, Missouri Pacific refunding 5s and Central Pacific guaranteed 5s declining, the latter to a new low for the year.

Trading in the foreign list was dull

U. S. RUBBER HAS DEFICIT OF $10,781.254 FOR THE 1928 YEAR

United States Rubber Company reports for the year ended Dec. 31, 1928, net income after depreciation, interest, etc., but before adjustment of rubber inventory, of $4,257,049. After adjustment of the value of rubber in inventories of finished goods and raw materials a deficit of $10,781,254 was shown. Income for last year included dividend received from United States Rubber Plantations, Inc., to the amount of $1,000,000.

Report of operations for 1928 includes, in addition to subsidiaries heretofore consolidated. Winnsboro Mills, Beacon Falls Rubber Shoe Company and the Rubber Regenerating Company, Ltd., of Manchester, Eng. These companies have previously been carried as investments. Consolidation is made in order more clearly to reflect the operating and financial conditions of the company as a whole.

operating and financial conditions of the company as a whole.

Results for 1928 compare with net income in 1927 of $6,251,481 after de-preciation, interest, etc. Net, however, included $4,000,000 net earnings of the United States Rubber Plantations, Inc. In the year ended Dec. 31, 1926, com-pany reported a net income of $13,161,-869, including $6,000,000 dividend from United States Rubber Plantations, Inc.

Tucker, Anthony & Co., Old Colony Corporation and Hill, Joiner & Co., Inc., are making public offering of an additional issue of $1,000,000 first and retunding mortgage series B 4½ per central cold bonds of the Public Service Company of New Hampshire. These bonds which are dated Oct. 1, 1927, and due Oct. 1, 1957, are priced at 94½, to yield about 4.85 per cent.

City a Logical Site The city is the logical site for a great school. The old-fashioned theory of keeping boys away from the temptations of the great city" has proved fallacious. The city is in itself largely a university. It affords libraries, museums, art galleries, great industries, experts in every field, and such varied types of society that it is in itself a vast experimental social laboratory. Here is opportheory of keeping boys away from that it is in itself a vast experimental social laboratory. Here is opportunity to learn all things, save possibly agriculture, through actual observation and experience. It is but servation and experience. In medieval days the so-called University of Paris was so widely scattered over the city that the inhabitants complained of being run over by crowds of students scurrying from the lecture room of one professor to that of another. Sometimes the early cities recognized such colleges as semi-municipal, and granted them funds; but for the most part these European universities have been supported through state aid and private donations. This has been, for example, the condition in Germany. But within the last decades the German cities have begun to realize the need of genuine in the stage and at the right and arched gateway. Why famous: An English general whose claim to fame was secure upon the fall of Quebec in 1759. Young

James Wolfe early received an ensign's commission. He played his part—and it was invariably a creditable one—at Falkirk, at Culloden and during the unfortunate expedition Real Temperature! against Rochefort. Then William Pitt, hearing of the young officer, singled him out for distinguished service The opportunity came when Pitt the sun out 24 hours a day the tembegan to act upon his plans for over-throwing the French dominion in Canada. Pitt possessed the vision of perature rarely, if ever, rises above the sun would never set, and with that goal in sight he struggled against the French in India and in Canada. It was the period of the Seven Years' War. And so he singled out Wolfe to command the expedition against that strongest Canadian fortress, Quebec. Already Wolfe had earned the title of "Hero of Louisburg," to which fortress he had laid siege for seven weeks. Now, with the rank of major-general, he landed "T DO wish," said Seeley, "that which stuck up out of the ground his forces on an island opposite

The French general, Montcalm, of fered so gallant and expert a defense that the rock fortress seemed im-pregnable. But General Wolfe found way. On a dark night in September, with a small force of picked men scattered in several boats, Wolfe slipped along noiselessly until directly under the French citadel. Then in single file the English crept up the face of the rock and stood upon the Plains of Abraham. When the French garrison awoke next day there was no alternative but battle The French, fighting bravely, were soon completely routed. Neither General Wolfe nor General Montcalm long survived, but both realized the outcome of the battle. The following year Montreal, too, fell into British hands. It was clear that Canada would form a part of the British

A Word a Day

Charity One's first reaction to this word may be the recollection of a gift to some needy person. But charity does not primarily have to do with money, but with love.

The Latin caritas, meant "dearness or love," from carus, "dear." The Greek χάρις (charis) meaning "fa-vor" is wholly unrelated. However, "charity," translating the Greek word ἀγάπη (agape), means "Chris-tian love." Man's love for God and God's love for man are shown in a practical way by man's love for man, in kind deeds done for those who need love. Since love and friendship are frequently evidenced by benevolence, the word charity has often been wrongly taken as synonymous with that. We are naturally inclined to be lenient in our judgment of those we care for, hence charity may signify a disposition to avoid harsh criticism. Good will toward the poor and liberality toward those in need are natural consequences of a dear regard and a loving disposition; thus charity becomes the actual realiza-tion of thoughtfulness in terms of Charity is the outpouring of love. Accent the first syllable of char' i-ty. Sound a as in am, i as in till, y as in fairy.

"Charity is a virtue of the heart and not of the hands."

Giving Justice a 1929 Model

Pdifficult task of remodeling its machinery of justice. The movement was, from the first, largely in the hands of Parliament and the layman, for it was found that the bench and bar were suspicious of change. Through several decades the improvement of judicial machinery went on, frequently supported by parliamentary commission and culminating in the Criminal Appeals Act which put English justice on a superbly efficient footing.

No parallel reform took place in the United States while this development was unfolding in England. The two great English-speaking countries retained the same common law basis for their jurisprudence, but the method of conducting civil, and especially criminal, trials drifted widely apart. In the English court the judge dominates the trial; in the American court the judge plays a subordinate rôle to another guiding authority: a vast body of regulations and statutes passed by various legislatures at various times, which circumscribe the judge's activity and limit his discretionary power. Through most of these statutes runs the distrust of the bench which was inherited from earliest colonial days. Under these rigid enactments technicality necessarily flourishes, till it is said that an American judge must pay more attention to preserving the rules of the game than in seeing justice done. Mr. Taft has called the condition "disgraceful," Mr. Wilson used the word "shocking," while Mr. Hughes recently denounced archaic court survivals as "fetters of justice." These distinguished men, and others, agreed that one of the major factors in the growing rate of crime in the Nation is the slow and cumbersome procedure of the courts.

Upon this scene, on March 4, entered Herbert Hoover. In his first address to the American people as President he went to the very heart of the matter. To find the remedy for the "delays and entanglements of the law," he said, "is the most sore necessity of our times." Mr. Hoover issued a solemn appeal for enforcement of the dry law, but he went further, and announced his purpose of appointing a "national commission for a searching investigation of the whole structure of the federal system of jurisprudence," as well as for an examination of the Eighteenth Amendment. His plan, in fact, is broad enough to be the basis for a campaign of reform similar to that completed in England.

Mr. Hoover's bold move came at a time when hope of securing federal action had almost been abandoned. Senators and representatives had been importuned on the subject, but hesitated to advocate a commission because, first, they anticipated difficulty in Congress; and, secondly, they disagreed on the method of naming its personnel. Mr. Hoover, of course, faces the second problem, although he has overcome the first. But at least his hands are free as to the appointments. He is expected to make them shortly. He deserves full credit both for making the commission possible and for broadening its scope to include the whole field of justice.

Many people noticed that as Mr. Chief Justice Taft administered the oath of office to Mr. Hoover, and reached the phrase, "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution," he strongly accented the word "defend." Untold millions in the listening radio audience heard the answering "I do!" Perhaps the steady glance passing between the two men at the dramatic moment indicated a more personal meaning than the words conveyed. In recent weeks in Washington a close association has existed between Mr. Hoover and leaders of the bench. His move for legal reform has the complete sympathy of the Chief Justice. Similarly, the choice of William D. Mitchell as Attorney-General, the Government's chief law officer, is known to have the warm indorsement of the Supreme Court. Perhaps the two men on the platform agreed, as the momentous question was asked and answered, that the readiest way of "defending" the Constitution at present is to bring law into respect by improving the administration of justice. One thing is certain. If Mr. Hoover in the next four years can introduce into the courts the same degree of efficiency now found, as a matter of course, in the processes of private business, his Administration will live in history on this one count alone.

Parties and Cabinets in Germany

NO DECISION has been reached in respect of the German Cabinet than that it shall continue. Hermann Müller, the German Chancellor, will carry on with the Cabinet of "personalities" which he formed last July. He announced then that his combination was only temporary and that he would continue his conversations with the party leaders in the hope that a "grand coalition," so long desired by President Hindenburg, could be formed. The same announcement is made now. An accommodation between the political "fractions" will be sought. Meanwhile, efforts will be made to get the budget through. Dr. Stresemann goes to Geneva. The reparation experts will go on with their work in Paris. The "crisis" will continue.

The difficulty arises from the nature of the German party system and from the attitude which the party leaders take toward cabinets. The German Reichstag is segmented into groups, no one of which has a majority of the deputies. This, however, is not the root of the trouble. It is not the absence of a two-party system, but the fact that the tenure of the Cabinet depends on the will of the leaders of the party "fractions" which makes for cabinet instability. The last elections resulted in considerable gains for the Socialists and other parties of the Left. Herr Müller, a Socialist, was therefore asked to form a ministry. It includes representatives of the Socialists, the People's Party, the Bavarian People's Party, the Roman Catholic Center, and the Democrats. They represent a large majority of the 490 members of the Reichstag. Herr Müller's ministerial declaration was approved by 261 to 134 votes. Twenty-eight deputies abstained.

This majority would seem to be sufficient. It would be sufficient if the Reichstag were the sole arbiter of the fate of cabinets. But the political "fractions"-particularly the Roman Catholic Center and the People's Party-wish to reserve the right to support or oppose the Cabinet according to the particular matter up for decision. They do not reserve this right primarily because of differences of views on what Herr Müller may propose. The leaders of the "fractions" are primarily concerned with political strategy and party advantage. Thus the Center wishes three places in a "grand coalition." Several weeks ago it instructed its adherent, Herr von Guerard, Minister of Transportation, to withdraw from the Cabinet. In this way it hoped to force the issue -an issue which has continued since last June, when Dr. Wirth, ex-Chancellor, desired to be Vice-Chancellor under Herr Müller. This post, however, had been abolished and President Hindenburg did not wish it to be re-established. Similarly, the People's Party wishes the theory of the "grand coalition" to be extended to the Prussian Government and its members to receive places in a Cabinet presided over by Dr. Otto Braun, a Socialist.

Thus the bickering continues, with Herr Müller vainly seeking a formula which will satisfy. Such bickering is not new. During some of the previous Cabinet crises six and seven weeks of negotiations have been necessary before the leaders of the "fractions" would agree to a new combination that could command the support of the Reichstag. The vast majority of crises since the adoption of the Weimar Constitution have resulted, not from no confidence votes by the Reichstag, but from the withdrawal of ministers by the "fractions." Hence Dr. Stresemann calls the system a "caricature" of parliamentary government. He, fortunately, will prevent the caricature from having immediately distressing consequences. Foreign problems are now to the fore. Dr. Stresemann has been Foreign Minister under a number of cabinets. He is likely thus to continue. In international affairs, therefore, the uncertain tenure of the Müller Cabinet does not mean that German foreign policy need be uncertain.

Is It America vs. Europe?

THE celebrated case of America vs. Europe has been too long debated. It should be dismissed for lack of evidence. The French writer, Lucien Romier, in his recent book on Europo-American relations, bluntly summed up the question when he asked: "Who will be the master, Europe or America?" And a group of fellow commentators soon joined him in his quest. It is becoming increasingly evident today that M. Romier has only been seeking an answer for a question which does not exist, and that his question is based upon a hypothesis both untimely and unfounded.

Even while the books are still streaming from the presses, discussing Europe and America as though they were antagonistic forces directed to opposite ends, the ineluctable trend of world affairs is drawing Europe and America into a common task—a task in which their present welfare and their future progress are closely linked. The fundamental factor which draws the two continents together and embarks them upon a partnership of mutual interest is that this world of international trade is, as never before, a unified and interdependent structure.

There can be no doubt that the security and prosperity of both Europe and the United States are to be found along the same road, in collaboration, and this view is becoming widely appreciated on the American side of the Atlantic. There are ample reasons for dispelling the European apprehension that American industry expects to find economic strength for its own self in the economic weakness of the European nations. American industry does recognize that American prosperity will best be promoted by European prosperity. The much discussed trend toward a "United States of Europe," a movement which has sometimes been described as a European economic entente, the better to oppose American competition, must likewise be seen as constituting no threat and no act of hostility toward the United States. To whatever extent the European countries are able to batter down the artificial trade barriers which hamper commerce all along the old boundaries, and along the several thousand miles of new frontiers which the Treaty of Versailles brought into existence, and to attain thereby something of the freedom of trade which prevails among the states of the American Union, to that extent Europe will be promoting its own economic progress and equipping itself to be a greater asset to world trade. A Europe which is economically strong and which is steadily advancing its own standards of living is the best friend and collaborator which America can

"The United States," as President Hoover remarked in his inaugural address, "fully accepts the profound truth that our own progress, prosperity and peace are interlocked with the progress, prosperity and peace of all humanity." Politically, as well as economically, America's co-operative interest compasses the globe. The Pact of Paris, hailed throughout Europe as the return of the United States to a policy of active participation in the maintenance of world peace, is recognized as no less in America.

This world of international business, while it may not always be an altruistic one, is recognizing today that its success rests only in mutual benefit and mutual progress. America and Europe are both finding that their progress is not a struggle for mastership, but the pursuit of a common task

Alien Offenders Warned

AS IS well known, an established policy long A ago adopted by the United States Government provides for the summary deportation of aliens who have been convicted of a felony under the criminal code of either nation or state. The regulation is in line with those provisions of the immigration statute which direct the deportation of all immigrants who, within a specified period after their admission to the country, become public charges. With the enactment by Congress of the so-called Jones-Stalker law, which provides for the punishment of violators of the Volstead prohibition enforcement act by placing heavier penalties upon them, these offenders automatically fall into the category of major criminals, thus subjecting themselves to the penalty which they probably most dread.

It is generally admitted to be a fact that a large percentage of those persons engaged in bootlegging and rumrunning are aliens who have gained admission to the United States by either legal or illegal methods. Within recent years it has been urged by many thoughtful persons that a registry of all aliens within the country be prepared and revised annually, those thus enumerated and properly accounted for to be subjected to the payment of a nominal head tax or fee to cover the expense of enrollment and certification. The plan has not been adopted. One result of the failure to follow such a method is the presence within the country, under the nominal protection of federal, state and municipal laws, of many thousands of aliens whose actual status can be discovered only with difficulty. Many of these are known to have entered the country without right or permission since the enactment of the quota law. They constitute, in the main, though not necessarily individually, an irresponsible and lawless element in the social and political fabric.

But the immigrant who has entered the country surreptitiously and by subterfuge is not, because of that fact alone, a greater potential liability than the alien who enters lawfully and thereafter elects to retain, indefinitely, his allegiance to some foreign potentate or government. The penalty of deportation which may now be invoked under the terms of the Jones-Stalker law may, eventually, confound and confuse the careless violator of the laws whose beneficent protection he seeks while choosing for himself the privilege of violating those with which he is not in sympathy.

The Future of the Physician

THE picture which Dr. Hugh Cabot, dean of the medical college of Michigan University, in Ann Arbor, drew recently in an article published in the Boston Post of the changes which he sees coming over the medical profession is interesting, to put it mildly. "The physician," he declared, "is losing his professional or 'private practice' identity. All the great corporations are now employing very competent medical departments to look after their entire personnel."

Dr. Cabot added that therein probably resided the future of the physician, pointing out that a vast medical organization was presupposed by such a development, and that all parts of that medical organization were functioning to safeguard the health of corporation employees and their families. While fully appreciating the discernment of Dr. Cabot in recognizing the general trend of affairs along the lines in question, it would seem that perhaps he, or rather big business in medicine for which he is thus the spokesman, is reckoning without its host, the people. It is true that such an organization as Dr. Cabot referred to appears to be in process of formation. But that it will ever assume the gigantic proportions which those who are sponsoring it would like to see is extremely doubtful.

There is unquestionably a growing sentiment in the United States, as well as in other countries where medical aggression has been permitted some considerable scope, which is operating to make the very state of affairs which Dr. Cabot sees in formation a virtual impossibility. Freedom of choice in methods of healing is being demanded by a growing number of people, and the voice that is thus at present somewhat inarticulately expressing itself can be expected to be heard with greater power and certainty as the years pass.

Big business may be taking over the medical profession. But the medical profession, or rather the clientele of that profession, is itself undergoing a change fully as revolutionary as any which Dr. Cabot foresees. Before a forecast can be made with any degree of assurance regarding what the future of the physician is to be, attention must be given to what the people themselves are demanding with reference to their inherent rights as citizens entitled to freedom of choice and action.

Editorial Notes

It hardly seems right to call the radio an "infant" industry any longer when it is remembered that the Radio Corporation of America reports gross earnings for 1928 of $100,000,000. That concern, moreover, is only one of many persons and corporations which are engaged in the radio field.

A new device for use in restaurants will divide pies or cakes into from three to thirty-four equal cuts. Patrons who have seen the good old quarter of a pie reduced to a sixth, and now to an eighth, evidently have something to look forward to.

Being an expert yacht skipper, perhaps Charles Francis Adams, the new Secretary of the Navy, can substitute a yacht race between Great Britain, Japan and the United States for the cruiser race.

If Mr. Edison succeeds in making rubber from weeds, the question of farm relief will, one would think, have taken a good step toward its solution.

If May 9 Is a Fine Day

By HARLOW SHAPLEY Director of the Harvard College Observatory

AGAIN the great sporting event of natural science is attracting astronomers and curiosity seekers to the ends of the earth. A total eclipse of the sun has set in motion a dozen eclipse expeditions from America, England, France, Italy, Holland, Germany and Australia. On May 9 the moon's shadow will pass swiftly across northern Sumatra, Kedah, Siam, Cambodia, the Philippine Islands, and the intervening bits of the Indian Ocean and South China Sea.

A total solar eclipse, fugitive and fascinating, is one of the luxuries of astronomical science. Months of preparation, weeks or months of travel, worry and suspense in the gamble with clouds, and finally, if fortune smiles, a few exciting minutes (all painfully rehearsed) with the solar corona, and with the weird approach of darkness in full daytime. This is indeed luxury, as is much exacting research where elaborate instrumental equipment is necessary to unravel the secrets of nature.

The attraction of the solar eclipse to the natural scientist is not, however, the pearly corona and the misplaced darkness that can be seen only at such times, but the opportunity of studying certain features of the nearest of all stars.

The sun has no sharp border; its upper atmospheres grade off into thinner and cooler layers. The brightness of the lower layers, which we call the sun's surface, is so great that outlying regions cannot be studied with success except when the moon conveniently conceals the most glaring portions of the solar disk. The eclipse of May 9 will permit those astronomers who have clear sky to examine the features of the solar corona continuously for four or five minutes, and, since photographic plates will be in operation, the study of this eclipse can also be carried on for months and years, using the photographic records brought home from the Far East.

Final details of the programs for the various expeditions that are now en route to the eclipse track are not available. It is known, however, that at least four groups will be involved in the Einstein problem: that is, in making photographs of stars near the sun's edge during totality in order to test further the predicted bending of starlight as it passes through the powerful gravitational field of the sun.

Tests of this sort have been made at earlier eclipses, and it is the nearly unanimous opinion of astronomers that the observations verify the theory; nevertheless, it is felt worth while to accumulate further observations on this very fundamental problem, not only to verify earlier work, but to get more accurate values of the amount of deflection and to be able to discriminate accurately between the Einstein effect and the smaller deflection that should be expected on the Newtonian theory alone.

One of these relativity groups goes from Swarthmore College; two British expeditions go from Greenwich and Cambridge to Alor Sta in Kedah and to Pattani in Siam; a German expedition from Potsdam will probably find a location in Sumatra, or possibly at Khoke Bhode in Siam

The most general problem that will be studied is the photometry of the corona, in the hope that a knowledge of the distribution of the light throughout this farreaching appendage of the sun will lead to knowledge of its nature. The form of the corona has some connection with sun spots, sun spots are related vaguely to terrestrial magnetic storms, and possibly to radio transmission. The photometric phases of the eclipse will be in the programs of the other American expeditions, one of which is from Harvard University and one from the United States Naval Observatory in Washington. The former probably goes to Kedah, in the Malay Peninsula, and the latter to Hoile in the Philippine Islands.

Iloilo in the Philippine Islands.

The ten or twelve different expeditions will be scattered widely along the eclipse path. It is hoped that the monsoon will not break too early and spoil the weather chances, which average about even for a workable sky. Probably somewhere along its track this eclipse of unusually long duration will be recorded for comparison with eclipses of the past and of the future. The shape of the corona will be analyzed; its light will be compared with standardized artificial sources of light; the wavelengths of coronal light will be more accurately measured with powerful spectroscopes. Many things, both simple and technical, will be learned of the sun and its atmosphere by fifty busy observers—that is, if the weather of

May 9 is propitious.

The Leviathan and the Moon

Valley, up through Beisan, perched high on a rocky spur, and so out into the plain of Jezreel, driving into an afternoon sun that was already turning golden over Carmel, forty miles away to the west. Our bumpy country road took us into the purple shadow of Mount Gilboa. The sun sank red into Haifa Bay, and as we climbed higher a full moon rose over the hills of Samaria. Our road zigzagged ahead of us like a ribbon of silver as we drove past Samaria and finally into Nablus, the ancient Shechem.

We were to dine in the town inn and while food was being prepared, I walked out onto a wide veranda overlooking the main street. Nablus, especially after nightfall, is usually deserted. This night I looked down on a large but curiously hushed crowd. They seemed to breathe tension, and every eye was directed above the black mass of Mount Ebal, Joshua's "mountain of cursing," over which the moon stood high, a glistening silver orb.

I was not alone. Also watching and also silent, was an Arab notable of the place, a magnificent figure in the moonlight, voluminous in his black burnous of the desert, his bronzed and bearded face contrasting grimly with the whiteness of his flowing headdress.

We passed five minutes in conventional salutations.

"Why," I asked at length, "is everybody out tonight?"
His eyes betrayed a pitying contempt for my western ignorance.

"Tonight," he replied, "the Leviathan will essay to swallow the moon."

I would have been completely at sea, had not the moon at that moment come to my rescue with the clue to his enigma. A slight shadow had just touched its rim. I had forgotten all about the eclipse.

"The Leviathan?" I hazarded.

"Yes. The Leviathan or as some call him, Behemoth. Tonight he will try to swallow our moon; and unless we scare him with our beatings, there will be no more moonlight for us in the darkness of the nights in the gloom of the valleys. But they," he pointed to the now whispering mob in the street below, "they are ready for him. They hate him and fear him. Did he not last summer destroy us all with his heavings and his rollings?"

us all with his heavings and his rollings?"
"Last summer?" I looked as blank as I felt. Two brown eves fixed me reproachfully.

eyes fixed me reproachfully.

"You are a stranger and maybe have not seen our town, our ruined houses, the desolation. You have not heard of what happened now eighteen months past. How the Leviathan in the deeps below us turned in his anger or his play and made the valley to rock and our houses to fall. It was Allah's will; but it was a hard lot for us all."

I did remember, but I had forgotten. As the shadow crept over the moon, he told me in the slow fatalistic tones of the East, how, when an August sun was at its height and all were resting within their houses, the earth had quaked and street after street in the narrow stone-built labyrinths which Nablus calls its thoroughfares, had crashed in ruins. "I was a hard lot for us all, and it was the Leviathan that did it. But they are ready tonight to save our moon from his maw."

The eclipse was almost complete, and "they" had gradually been working themselves up. Drums and gongs were being beaten wildly. One youth was belaboring a cheap German kettle. At first it seemed haphazard. Eventually a rhythm emerged. Tum-tum-tum: tum-tum. The crowd had caught it and began to chant. The origin of their incantation is lost in antiquity. It is almost a sacrilege to attempt to translate its sense:

Away thou monster Leave our moon. Thou shalt not take her She is ours! Back to thy depths, Leviathan the cruel, Cease thy ravening!

It was a crescendo of sound, rising and speeding as the frenzied drummers and gong beaters quickened the time. Some danced, but always in step, tum-tum-tum: others clapped their hands—tum-tum-tum, weird rows of capering white-robed figures, lurching this way and that, but always in step, always in time. I watched my Arab friend. His lean body was swaying. I found my own foot beating a tattoo on the paved floor of the veranda.

A suddenly louder commotion in the street attracted me. The veranda was empty. I spotted my Arab friend among the crowd, one of a long row of loosely robed fellow townsmen, shouting, clapping and dancing. The rhythm was quite hysterical: for the shadow was passing and the moon would be saved.

From the World's Great Capitals-London

LONDON CIR JAMES BARRIE'S delightful comedy, "Quality Street," which had such a success when it was first produced in 1902, has just been revived again at the Haymarket Theater, and the work of getting it ready developed some amusing incidents, one of which concerns the old shop which Barrie mentions as being the only one in "Quality Street." The Haymarket clings to its old traditions, especially those connected with its famous Green Room. Here the manager, Horace Watson, entertains the cast with light refreshments after every matinée. In the foreword to "Quality Street," Barrie explains that the only shop in the street sells "Whimsy Cake." Mr. Watson thought that this being so, whimsy cake would be a logical thing for him to offer his guests some afternoon, and he asked Sir James just what whimsy cake is. Barrie confessed he didn't know. He said he had seen a reference to it somewhere, and it struck him as just the thing that a shop in "Quality Street" ought to sell; but he couldn't remember where he had seen the reference. No one else seems to know, although there is a suggestion that it is the same as the old English luncheon cakes, which were cut up and buttered. But the search is on, and if England or Scotland contains any such article as genuine whimsy cake, it is expected to make its appearance shortly at the Haymarket.

The Shrove Tuesday "pancake greeze" which takes place annually at Westminster School is a rough-and-tumble in which a whole lot of boys struggle in a heap, hoping that, after three minutes, one of them will emerge the possessor of what shall be adjudged to be the largest portion of the so-called pancake. Dressed in the oldest football clothes obtainable, the boys wait for the school cook to hurl his specially made, leathery pancake over a bar in "school," and then comes the scrimmage. This year the headmaster had to call for scales, judging by the eye being impossible, and finally awarded the golden sovereign to J. D. Argyle of the Sixth Form. "But," said Dr. Foxley Norris, "our sympathies go out to that gentleman who had so much of the pancake on his coat that we could not weigh it."

A story of the first Duke of Wellington has been resuscitated in a controversy on bad handwriting in the press in London. John Claudius Loudon, landscape designer, wrote to the duke for permission to inspect the "Waterloo beeches," trees planted in commemoration of operations against Napoleon. The handwriting was such that the duke read the request as being for a view of the "Waterloo breeches." He also supposed the sender, who signed himself "J. C. Loudon," must be the then Bishop of London, Charles James Blomfield, whose official signature was "C. J. London." The reply, therefore, was: "My Dear Bishop of London: It will always give me great pleasure to see you at Strathfieldsaye. My servant will receive orders to show you as many pairs of breeches of mine as you wish, but why you should wish to inspect those I wore at the battle of Waterloo is quite beyond the comprehension of, Yours most truly, Wellington." It was only after the Archbishop of Canterbury had been called in that the mistake was explained.

London has been enjoying an unusual exhibition of ancient and modern bridges arranged by the Architectural Association and covering more than 2000 years of bridge building. The show includes drawings, prints and photographs of every conceivable type of bridge. The graceful bridges of early times compel the belief that this was the earliest form of artistic design in which true beauty was achieved. Roman bridges are represented by the Pont du Gard, the old aqueduct near Nimes in the lower Rhone valley, and from that period the changes of the Renaissance and then to modern days are clear. The modern concrete bridges of England, Holland and Germany which are shown illustrate how quickly engineers and designers, using a new and little-known form of material and construction, have succeeded in finding grace, beauty and practicability.

London has just had a visit from that remarkable celebrity Col. Thomas Edward Lawrence, otherwise known as "Mr. Smith," or Aircraftsman Shaw, who is famous for his exploits in rallying the Arabs of southern Arabia to the allied cause during the war. Some time ago he changed his name to Shaw and enlisted in the Royal Airforce in India, where he now holds the rank of aircraftsman. He has also given out his name as "Mr. Smith" to escape publicity, of which he is extraordinarily shy. He has recently been sent back to England from India owing to persistent use of his name in anti-British propaganda emanating from Moscow, which has represented him, British authori-ties claim entirely unfoundedly, as engaged in intrigues in Afghanistan connected with the dethronement of King Amanullah. Aircraftsman Shaw was one of the original members of the brilliant group of "Round Table" students of international affairs. He acquired his influence among the Arabs when conducting archæological researches in Mesopotamia. He was elected to a research fellowship of All Souls College, Oxford, in 1919. 1 1 1

An amusing sidelight on the way in which certain aspects of Western civilization strike the "unchanging" East was given at a recent meeting of the Central Asian Society here. The lecturer, Sirdar Ikbal Alī Shah, an Afghan Moslem educated in India, said that one of the favorite objurgations of the citizens of Mecca is, "May you ride a bicycle." Sir Arnold Wilson, manager of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, added another instance from his own experience. Some time ago when he was visiting Kerbala, in Irak, an unpopular official was being removed. As he left the town he was greeted with cries of, "Puncture." As against this may be put the fact that the Arabs have thoroughly adopted the motorcar. Indeed, in making a niche for it in their language, they have gone one better than the West, for the somewhat clumsy word "automobile" certainly sounds much nicer in its Arabic form,
